MERIDEN AEROPLANE.

Invention of Two Local Young Men-Represents Investment of About $1,000.

There is a real aeropiane in Meriden, the invention of two local young men, Leon Englehart and Norman Huneven, which from present indications will make the first flight in Meriden, says the Journal. The machine is a sub-stantial structure and appears as well designed to stand the strain of flights as any work of the big inventors.

These two local youths have built a biplane according to their own plans and specifications, following the Curtiss type nearer than any other, although it is mostly original.

There is a spread of twenty-four feet along the planes, which are four feet along the planes, which are four feet eight inches wide and four feet apart. The machine is equipped with a double bladed rear propeller of the Regue-Gigson make. The aeroplane stands on three wheels with pneumatic tires. It is equipped with a Ford four-cylinder engine developing twenty-two horse power. The engine weighs 150 pounds and the total lifting capacity of the heavier than air machine is estimated at 900 pounds. The rudder is of the usual type, controlled by a steering wheel in front The rudder is of the usual type, controlled by a steering wheel in front.

The rising planes in front extent ten feet in front of the machine. Curtiss stapelizers or wing tips, which are used in balancing the machine, are used.
The youthful aviators have invented an entirely new stapelizer which they intend to try out later.

The supporting surface will be composed of a special silk cloth put out posed of a special silk cloth put out ty the St. Louis Aeronautic Supply company. Spruce supports are used and the guy wires are adjustable.

The biplane is strongly constructed and its lifting power should exceed any demands made upon it. Experts who have viewed it say that it is entirely practical and not a toy. From the practical and not a toy. From the present outlook it seems that these two boys, yet in their teens, will be the first Meriden aviators and will give the first Meriden flight.

At Sheepshead Bay recently the boys received instructions upon flying from the birdman Williard, who uses a Wright biplane.

It is claimed that the machine represents an investment of about $1,000.

BALLADE OF THE FADED FIELD

Broad bars of sunset-stained gold.
Are laid along the field, and here
The slience sings, as if some old Refrain that once rang long and clear.
Came softly, stealing to the ear
Without the aid of sound. The rill
Is voiceless, and the grass is sere,
But beauty's soul abideth still.

Trance-like, the mellow air doth hold.
The sorrow of the passing year;
The heart of nature groweth cold.
The time of falling snow is near;
On phantom feet, which none management.

Creeps—with the shadow of the hill— The semblance of departed cheer, But beauty's soul abideth still.

The dead gray-clustered weeds enfold
The well-known summer path, and drear
The dusking hills, like billows rolled
Against the distant sky, appear
From lonely haunts, where Night and Fear
Keep ghostly tryst, when mists are chill. The dark pine lifts a jagged spear, But beauty's soul abideth still.

ENVOY. Dear love, the days that once were drear
May come no more: life may fulfill
Her fleeting dreams with many a tear
But beauty's soul abldeth still.
—Robert Burns Wilsen.

THE SINGER OF ONE SONG.

He sang one song and died—no more but that:

A single song and carelessly complete.

He would not bind and thrash his chance-grown wheat.

Nor bring his wild fruit to the common vat.

Nor bring his wild fruit to the common vat.

To store the acid rinsings, thin and fial.

Squeezed from the press or trodden under feet.

A few slow beads, blood-red and honey-sweet.

Oozed from the grape, which burst and split its fat.

But Time who soonest drops the heavisalt things.

That weight his pack, will carry diamonds long.

So, through the poet's orchestra, which weaves.

One music from a thousand straps and strings.

Pieces the note of that immortal song:

"High over all the lonely bugls grieves."
